Your Essential Toolkit: Sample CASAC Exam Questions for New York State

Now, let's get down to what you've been waiting for – sample questions designed to mimic the style and content of the New York State CASAC exam. Remember, these are for practice and study purposes. The actual exam will be administered by a testing service, and these samples are intended to give you a feel for the types of scenarios and knowledge tested.

Sample Questions: Assessment and Triage

Question 1: A client presents with a history of polysubstance abuse, including alcohol, benzodiazepines, and opioids. They report experiencing intense cravings and significant withdrawal symptoms when attempting to stop. Which of the following assessment tools would be most appropriate for a preliminary screening of their immediate risks? a) The Beck Depression Inventory (BDI) b) The Alcohol Use Disorders Identification Test (AUDIT) c) The Clinical Opiate Withdrawal Scale (COWS) d) The DSM-5 Criteria for Substance Use Disorders Answer and Rationale: The correct answer is c) The Clinical Opiate Withdrawal Scale (COWS). *

Rationale: While the AUDIT is useful for alcohol, and the DSM-5 is the diagnostic manual, the COWS scale is specifically designed to assess the severity of opioid withdrawal symptoms, which is a critical immediate concern for this client given their reported history and symptoms. The BDI assesses depression, which is important but not the most immediate risk in this scenario. Question 2: During an intake assessment, a client reports experiencing auditory hallucinations and paranoia, in addition to their primary substance use disorder. This presentation strongly suggests the possibility of: a) A solely substance-induced psychotic disorder. b) A primary psychotic disorder with a co-occurring substance use disorder. c) Withdrawal from stimulants. d) Acute intoxication with cannabis. Answer and Rationale: The correct answer is *b) A primary psychotic disorder with a co-occurring substance use disorder. Rationale: While substances can induce psychosis, persistent hallucinations and paranoia, especially if they predate or continue after acute intoxication, are more indicative of a primary psychotic disorder (like schizophrenia) that is co-occurring with a substance use disorder. Options c and d are too specific and might not fully explain the complex presentation.

Sample Questions: Treatment Planning

Question 3: A client has identified "improving their relationships with their children" as a primary recovery goal. Which of the following treatment interventions would be most appropriate to include in their treatment plan to address this goal? a) Weekly individual counseling focusing on self-esteem. b) Participation in a parent education and support group. c) Intensive outpatient treatment for opiate dependence. d) Referrals for vocational rehabilitation services. Answer and Rationale: The correct answer is b) Participation in a parent education and support group. Rationale: This option directly targets the client's stated goal of improving relationships with their children by providing education and support specifically for parenting. While self-esteem (a), intensive treatment (c), and vocational help (d) are important aspects of recovery, they don't directly address the relational goal as effectively as a parent-focused intervention. Question 4: A treatment plan for a client with a severe alcohol use disorder should include interventions that address: a) Only the physiological aspects of addiction. b) The psychological, social, and biological dimensions of addiction. c) Primarily vocational and housing needs. d) Exclusive focus on relapse prevention techniques. Answer and Rationale: The correct answer is b) The psychological, social, and biological dimensions of addiction. Rationale: Addiction is a complex bio-psycho-social disease. Effective treatment plans must address all these interconnected aspects for lasting recovery. Focusing on only one dimension (a, c, or d) would be insufficient.

Sample Questions: Counseling Skills and Techniques

Question 5: A client expresses ambivalence about stopping their drug use, stating, "I know I need to stop, but I don't know if I can. It helps me cope with stress." The counselor's best response, utilizing motivational interviewing principles, would be: a) "You need to stop using drugs immediately. There is no other option." b) "Tell me more about how drugs help you cope with stress." c) "Your family is very concerned, and you need to prioritize their feelings." d) "Let's focus on the negative consequences of your drug use." Answer and Rationale: The correct answer is b) "Tell me more about how drugs help you cope with stress." Rationale: This response aligns with motivational interviewing's emphasis on exploring the client's ambivalence and understanding their perspective. It invites deeper exploration of the perceived benefits of substance use, which is a crucial step in resolving ambivalence. Option a is confrontational, c places external pressure, and d is a good element but bypasses understanding the client's current perspective. Question 6: During a group therapy session for individuals recovering from substance use disorders, a member becomes agitated and begins to verbally attack another member. The group facilitator's immediate priority should be to: a) Allow the group members to resolve the conflict themselves. b) Shut down the group and send everyone home. c) Intervene to de-escalate the situation and maintain a safe environment. d) Focus solely on the member who is being attacked. Answer and Rationale: The correct answer is c) Intervene to de-escalate the situation and maintain a safe environment. Rationale: The facilitator's role is to ensure the safety and therapeutic effectiveness of the group. De-escalation is crucial to prevent harm and to maintain a space where all members feel secure. Options a, b, and d fail to address the immediate need for safety and professional intervention.

Sample Questions: Professional and Ethical Responsibilities

Question 7: A client informs their CASAC that they plan to engage in illegal activities to support their substance use. As a mandated reporter, what is the counselor's primary ethical and legal obligation in this situation? a) To maintain strict confidentiality to encourage continued disclosure. b) To report the planned illegal activity to the appropriate authorities. c) To encourage the client to stop their illegal activities without reporting. d) To discuss the consequences of illegal activities with the client only. Answer and Rationale: The correct answer is b) To report the planned illegal activity to the appropriate authorities. Rationale: CASACs are often mandated reporters, meaning they are legally obligated to report suspected child abuse, neglect, or in some cases, imminent danger to self or others, or planned illegal activities that could cause harm. Confidentiality has limits, and reporting potential harm is a critical ethical duty.

Question 8: A CASAC is approached by a former client's spouse seeking information about the client's progress in treatment. The CASAC has a signed release of information that expired six months ago. What is the most ethical course of action? a) Provide the information since the spouse is family. b) Inform the spouse that the release of information has expired and confidentiality prevents sharing any details. c) Ask the former client for a new release of information. d) Share general information about the program's success rates. Answer and Rationale: The correct answer is b) Inform the spouse that the release of information has expired and confidentiality prevents sharing any details. Rationale: Confidentiality is paramount. An expired release of information means consent to share has been withdrawn. The counselor cannot assume consent or provide information without a current, valid release. While asking for a new release (c) might be an option if the client is still being treated, in this scenario with a former client, option b is the most direct and ethical approach to uphold confidentiality. Sharing general program success rates (d) is irrelevant and unethical in this context.

Sample Questions: Pharmacology of Substances of Abuse

Question 9: Which of the following substances is known for its depressant effects on the central nervous system and can cause significant respiratory depression in overdose? a) Cocaine b) Amphetamines c) Heroin d) MDMA (Ecstasy) Answer and Rationale: The correct answer is c) Heroin. Rationale: Heroin, an opioid, is a potent CNS depressant. Respiratory depression is a primary concern and a leading cause of overdose deaths associated with opioids. Cocaine and amphetamines are stimulants, and MDMA has mixed stimulant and empathogenic effects.

Question 10: A client undergoing detoxification from alcohol may experience which of the following withdrawal symptoms? a) Euphoria and increased energy b) Tremors, anxiety, and potential seizures c) Hallucinations of a visual nature only d) Hyperactivity and elevated mood Answer and Rationale: The correct answer is b) Tremors, anxiety, and potential seizures. Rationale: Alcohol withdrawal can be severe and life-threatening. Symptoms range from mild anxiety and tremors to severe cases involving hallucinations, delirium tremens, and seizures. Euphoria, hyperactivity, and elevated mood are not typical withdrawal symptoms from alcohol.
